Kindling Integration Waterfall Project Management Model

Are you using the Waterfall Model as a Project Management Methodology? The Kindling Planning Methodology can easily integrate into the Waterfall Project Management Model

The Waterfall Project Management Model is a sequential design process, often used in software development projects, in which the process is seen as flowing steadily from phase to phase (like a waterfall).

The Kindling Project Planning Workshop easily integrates into the Requirements Phase of the Waterfall Model. This phase is designed to capture user requirements and develop the project plan. At the end of a Kindling Workshop, the Project Manager will have an actionable project plan as well as buy-in from the project team. User acceptance is a key component of the Waterfall Model. Sign-off of each phase must be obtained before the next phase may begin. The Kindling Workshop can easily provide this approval during the Requirements Phase since the project team is actively involved in the development of the project plan
